

Campaign Approach

Description, Marketing Objective & KPI

Description

Since my assigned project is to advertise Deep Learning by Google, I am targeting the audiences in the field of data science, machine learning, python programming and mathematics. In the process of creating campaign in AdWords, First, we chose the type of campaign. I chose Search Network only because we are focusing on search ads. There are some more advanced types to be selected for campaign like mobile app install, call only. Here we chose Standard since it is a keyword targeted text ad showing on google search results. Next we chose Network where our ad will be displayed. By default it was set to Google Search Network that includes google search partners. We can choose on what device our ads will be showing. In my case the ad will show on all eligible devices by default. For my campaign I chose two specific locations Ireland and New Zealand. Based on my location selection AdWords shows me English and Polish for language selection. Since my course material is in English I prefer to select English as a language for my targeted customers. Now budget options. By selecting "Manual CPC" I would have full control on paying maximum on per click. According to my project requirement I set a daily budget of $25.00. In the creation of Ad groups we need to focus on stage of our customer in customer journey. I have created two ads named Awareness and Interest respectively. Next important thing is selection of keywords. The keywords list should have brand, generic, related and competitor terms. We can use synonyms, abbreviation and misspelled words as well. During the creation of ads for each ad groups it is important to focus on headlines and description.

Marketing Objective & KPI

Marketing objective of this AdWords campaign is to collect email addresses of 20 students who are interested in doing Deep Learning course within 5 days.

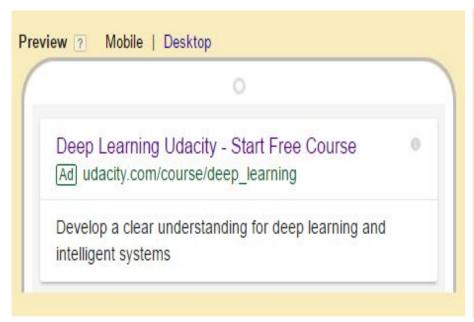

KPI for my ad campaign is the number of email addresses collected within 5 days.

Campaign Evaluation

Marketing objective of my AdWords campaign was to collect email addresses of 20 students under the budget of $125. Therefore cost per lead would be $6.25 which means I cannot spend more than $6.25 for one conversion. My expected conversion rate was 20%. But according to AdWords metrics of my ad campaign I paid $59.40 per conversion which is far more than I expected therefore I have a negative ROI. The conversion rate is 3.17% which is much lower than I would have been expected of 20%. I spend $1.89 as an average cost per click which is ok as my maximum CPC bid was $3. "Deep Learning Udacity, Start Free Course" ad from "Awareness" ad group got the highest CTR of 3.55% and conversion rate of 3.17%. As cost per click for Keyword "Coursera classes" was 2.24 and average position was 2.8, it looks like Coursera keywords are highly competitive in AdWords. Other keyword "free learning" classes" has average CPC 1.24 and average position was 2.6 which show that broad match keywords get more impressions but conversion is very low. Since my objective was to get more conversion, I would prefer to put more specific keywords in my ad campaign.

Recommendations for future campaigns

If I would have additional budget—

I would figure out why only one ad group of my campaign has got impressions in AdWords. I would run an A/B testing to find out whether it was headline/ description (or both) or anything else. See if the issues are because of landing page or keyword match type.

I would lower the CPC bid by relevant keywords with less competition. In case of keywords selection I will go for more generic terms to reach a large people who might convert into a lead. I would pause the keywords with low CTR and use negative keywords to reach specific audience.
